DISCUSS SITE FOR DEPOT

Meeting Held Wednesday is Unanimous Against Moving to New Site

EAST TRAIN SERVICE DENIED

Site for New Depot Will Be Donated to Railroad Provided Depot is Built West
Side of Track on Present Street

Much has been said in the past in regard to securing a more adequate train service for the village of Antioch. The residents of the village claiming that the amount of traffic afforded the Soo Line from this station should warrant the stopping of the fast train here both morning and evening. This of course would be a valued addition to the service here especially in the winter time when the business men's train has been discontinued and practically the only available train for Chicago passengers is the milk train which arrives in the city at 10:20 and leaves again at 3:45. And it is also argued that this service is equally inconvenient for the city residents who make many trips to their property in this vicinity.

Although the subject has been so long under discussion, no definite action was taken in the matter until a few months ago when the town board submitted the request to the President of the road, through Attorney Eugene M. Runyard of Waukegan, and Dr. E. H. Ames, president of the village board, made a trip to Chicago for an interview with the General Passenger Agent in behalf of the citizens of the town.

The officials of the road took the matter under advisement and sent a representative here to look over the existing conditions, and after due consideration replied as follows:

Mr. E. M. Runyard,
Assistant State's Attorney,
Waukegan, Ill.

Dear Sir:—
Your letter of the 23rd inst., to the President relative to the stoppage of trains Nos. 3 and 4 at Antioch has been referred to me.

For your information I am sending you herewith a blueprint showing the profile of the track on either side of the station. You will note that northbound there is a 1.00 per cent grade for about 4000 feet, and southbound the grade is .85 per cent for exactly 2000 feet. The two trains mentioned above are heavy through trains with important connections at either terminus, and it is imperative that time be made when possible. The trains are already overburdened and I am sorry to say are not as regular as we hope to make them.

If the people at Antioch would consider the removal of the station to the south about 2000 feet we will be very glad to consider the matter of stopping these two trains there so long as we have no other service on approximately the same schedule.

Yours truly,
O. R. Huntington
General Manager

Upon receipt of this letter a meeting of the business men citizens and property owners was called at the town hall last Wednesday evening, by the President of the village board, for the purpose of ascertaining the sentiment of the people in regard to the moving of the depot.

About fifty of the townspeople attended the meeting and after the reading of the letter and the exhibiting of the blue print, a vote was taken on the question, which resulted in a unanimous vote against moving it toward the south and an almost unanimous vote in favor of its being moved as far north as the stock yards.

We understand that J. J. Morley stands in readiness to donate the ground at any time that the management may see fit to erect a new depot on the west side of the track just opposite of the present location. This plan too seems to meet with the general approval of the public, many declaring that the depot is already located and the town built accordingly and that it should therefore remain where it is.

FINES AND DISTRIBUTION

The Amounts as Apportioned to the Several Townships and Cities

County Superintendent of Schools T. A. Simpson makes public annual report in regard to collection and distribution of fines. The rate this year will be lower than other years, 32.4 cents.

The Waukegan justices have turned over to State's Attorney Dady the following amounts for the school fund:

Justice Weiss	$ 38.00
Justice Taylor	18.00
Justice Bridgman	6.00
Justice Murre	125.00
Justice Bulz	35.00

$247.00

The amount received from the state was $5,447.72, making the total amount for distribution $6,016.47.

The total number of persons in the county under twenty-one, the basis for distribution, is 18,538, this makes the rate for distribution 32.4 cents, against 46.4 cents last year, and 43.9 cents two years ago.

Township 46-12—O. W. Farley, treasurer $748.44.

City of Lake Forest, $365.47.

BURGLARS AT LAKE VILLA

McMahon's Saloon and Avery & Kerr's Hardware Store Entered

Lake Villa has again been the scene of another burglary, for on Monday morning of this week near the hour of three o'clock, burglars forced an entrance first into the saloon owned by J. J. McMahon and later into the hardware store conducted by Kerr & Avery which they entered by cutting a hole in the rear door and forcing the lock.

Here they secured a quantity of jack knives, a couple of loaves of bread and some cheese, and were turning their attention to the safe when they were detected by T. J. Webb, next door to the store, who hastened to the telephone and spread the news. At once a number of the citizens started out with the intention of making a capture of the thief or thieves, but there was evidently a sentry on guard who gave the alarm at the first signs of danger, and the miscreants had made good their escape before the arrival of the residents, but so hasty was their departure that they left their lunch spread out, and also failed to take with them their kit of tools which they left lying on the floor near the door through which they entered.

At McMahon's they appropriated the cash register and carrying it to the shed in the rear of the saloon prepared to pocket the contents, but were rewarded by securing only a trifling sum.

For the second trustee J. H. Reading and W. H. Osmond were both proposed and when the ballots were counted it was found that Reading had received the nomination by securing 26 votes to 3 for Osmond.

For third trustee the contest was between Charles F. Richards and Herman Tenbruggen, the latter winning over the former by a vote of 18 to 12.

For village clerk L. M. Hughes was nominated by acclamation.

For the office of treasurer the nomination was also made by acclamation, J. E. Brook being the nominee.

L. M. Hughes, the acting chairman then appointed the following committee to act for the ensuing year: Geo. Olcott, G. E. Webb and E. L. Simons.

The Township election held Tuesday was quite well attended but was a rather tame affair, a total of 402 votes was cast, while two years ago when the local option issue was a feature 506 votes were cast. The only contest on at this election was for the office of collector, W. T. Taylor, the caucus nominee and Percy Dibble who opposed him by petition both making a lively run for the office with the result that Taylor won by a majority of 113 votes out of the total number cast.

HOLD CRAZY CHINAMAN

Celestial With $180 in His Pockets Taken by Highland Park Police.

The first crazy Chinaman to be found in Lake county, was picked up Friday afternoon, by the Highland Park police and he is now in the McAlister hospital, Waukegan, where the nurses are keeping close watch over him.

His name is M. Leng, according to the marks on his clothing, but he would not give his name himself, being in such a condition that he will talk but little although he can speak English somewhat. In order to get to the bottom of his case, the Waukegan health authorities had a Chinese interpreter come out from the Chicago police department but he also could get little out of the Chinaman.

Occasionally the fellow would speak and from what could be obtained, he runs a laundry with a brother on the west side, Chicago. He said that he is always hearing noises and that last week his brother got scared and ran away and he followed shortly afterwards. He doesn't know where he has been, doesn't know how he got to Lake county and doesn't know much of anything excepting that he hears so much noise he cannot sleep or even eat.

He had $180 in his pockets and was willing at times to give it to the nurses to care for him but, shortly afterwards, he would again demand his money.

The interpreter, asked to have him cared for at the hospital for a few days and he will be held there as he is not violent as yet.

BRIDGE BURNS ON BELT LIME NEAR ROUND

The E. J. & E. railroad bridge located two miles south of Roundout caught fire Saturday afternoon and seventy feet of it was destroyed before the flames were extinguished. The bridge is 200 feet long and sparks from a passing engine set it afire shortly after noon on Saturday. The bridge crosses the Des Plaines river and affords the only crossing for the main line of the railroad. All traffic was tied up between Waukegan and Joliet until 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, when a temporary structure was completed.

Farmers residing south of Roundout first discovered that the bridge was on fire and notified the company's office. The farmers organized a bucket brigade and fought the flames until a special train arrived from Waukegan with a crew of section men. A large number of buckets were taken to the scene of the fire by the special train and the flames were extinguished after some time, but between sixty and seventy feet of the railroad bridge had been destroyed.

The prompt work of the farmers residing near the bridge is thought to have been responsible for the fact that the entire bridge was not destroyed by the fire and their efforts in fighting the flames were greatly appreciated by the railroad officials. The traffic between Waukegan and Joliet is light usually on Sundays and the company was not greatly inconvenienced by the fire. The cost of repairing the structure will be considerable. The dry weather during the spring until Sunday night was responsible for the fire, according to a railroad official.

JUDGE JONES RETIRES

Declares He Is Ont of the Race for Renomination for County Judge

PEARSONS HAS CLEAR FIELD

At a Dinner Given to the Bar of Lake County Judge Announces He Will Retire When Term is Out

Judge D. L. Jones, Judge of the County Court of Lake County, last Monday evening entertained sixteen of the members of the Lake County bar at a dinner at his residence on North Ganese street, the nature of the dinner, its purpose etc., having been a mystery in the minds of many of the attorneys up to the time when the judge spoke following the serving of the dinner.

And not until the Judge's short talk was it known that his purpose in calling his friends to the dinner was to formally announce that he is not to be a candidate for re-election and to urge them to unite on some man for his successor.

While the attorneys received his announcement with kindly interest, there was no move made to bring out any one man's name as a possibility for a union of effort on the part of the bar but at the same time the judge added that he did not care to have that step taken at the dinner.

However, the fact that the only avowed candidate for the judgeship, Perry L. Persons, was not present, because he alone did not receive an invitation to attend, would seem to indicate that Judge Jones is out against the popular attorney who almost defeated him four years ago, losing to Judge Jones by but 300 votes in the county. Mr. Persons received no invitation to attend although the judge announced that he had invited the bar of the county to dine with him upon this occasion.

SYNOPSIS.

Basel Tempest, world's greatest poet and novelist, refusing further to be lionized, shuts himself up in Craven, his country home. His gloomy meditations are broken by the admission of an American, Lucy Carow, who has come to England to get a study of a synopsis of his new poem, especially a synopsis of his new poem, especially a synopsis of his new poem. Tempest, angry at being disturbed, declares he will write no more, and asks Lucy to go. Repenting his rudeness in sending her out at night in the rain, Tempest hastens after her, but she refuses to return to Craven with him and takes lodging with a cottager. Next morning Lucy receives an apology from Tempest and an offer to assist her in writing her essay. Tempest dictates to Lucy, who listens spellbound as she writes. Lucy decides to go to London, but Tempest induces her to remain and read her manuscript to him. Lucy declines the invitation to dine with Tempest, who in anger and disappointment, goes to London. He asks Lady Ormond, with whom he has been linked in leave her husband, promising to marry her when the husband gets a divorce. She insists on the divorce first. Tempest departs for Craven. He burns Lady Ormond's picture after forming a reluctant opinion of that lady from Lucy.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

"I mean," he said, quietly, "that I have not written, as I told you, in six months. That, thanks to some jockey star, I am in vogue once more. How long this will last I don't know. I may wake up to find myself an idiot to-morrow. To-night, at least, I could write on until daylight. If there is any merit at all in these papers you have written out for me, let it speak as strongly as it can."

He stopped, looked at her, saw her interest, and went on: "I mean to say there will be no more unless this mood continues without interruption."

Still she waited, her face bent a little, her eyes on the roses in her hands.

"That unless I can continue as I have begun," dictate to you, as the inspiration comes, I shall certainly fling the manuscript in the fire."

Miss Carow heard with gratitude the rolling up of the motor car—short as the distance was it had been ordered to take her home. She stood bewildered. His nearness to her, his eyes upon her, overpowered her. She longed to escape, and with no apparent regard to what he so selfishly demanded she took a hurried leave of him.

Tempest, after Miss Carow had gone, walked to and fro in the yellow room; reflecting on her, his eyes still full of the fear of her he allowed himself so freely to make and which she with charming unconsciousness permitted. She was unconscious; there was no doubt of that, otherwise she would not be able to meet his regard with the fine, clear look that made him liken her eyes to wells of light. At the same time he put his hands over his eyes that burned and stung.

"If I could only steep them in those cool depths, bathe them there, kindle their torch, as my mind's torch has been relit. Heavily," he ordered, when the housekeeper appeared in answer to the bell he had rung, "I wish to dine here."

"Yes, Mr. Basil"—as she would have said it had he expressed the intention of dining on the Trafalgar monument.

"And serve me yourself, will you? Put a few things on a tray, you know, and clear off a little table. Don't let a servant come near me."

"No, Mr. Basil." She looked furiously at the gay box of a room as if, in spite of her eyes, which had seen Miss Carow drive away, she fancied her encircled somewhere; there was a sense of intimacy and coyness in the little room where the fire had slowly devoured every ugly black ash of the discarded picture. The pungent odors of the roses, drawn out by the warmth, still hung on the air. "This sweet-box," as Mrs. Henly dubbed it, seemed suddenly to have become very sweet indeed!

"You're fagged out with the long trip, sir. It's too much for a day, isn't it?"

"It's enough and to spare. I shall rest here. I want never to see London again." He had said this before and it did not dismay her.

She noiselessly and quickly cleared off a little stand and put it before the divan where Tempest had thrown himself.

"You'll like early supper, sir?"

"Yes, when you choose."

"Wouldn't you go and have your bath and get fresh up, Mr. Basil? I've laid out your things." In the good creature's eyes that rested on Tempest, with the respect that decorum demanded, any woman would have seen the auto-cress that could never be expressed, as she passed back of him, close to him—one could fancy she laid her hand on his hair.

When, an hour later, Tempest returned to the asylum he had chosen in which to follow out a train of thought whose spell he did not wish broken, a brightened blaze, a bunch of pale violets in a vase beside a tempting little meal already spread met his eye—just the repast to please his fastidious palate and stimulate without the full, heavy sense of having as usual dined; a cold pheasant, a well-made salad, cooled champagne; then Henly with an ice, and later his coffee. She had with true unbending, as if to cater to his sight, even put on a little apron with bows at the pockets.

"Heavily in an apron! What things I make you do!"

"Not half enough. I never see you these days, Mr. Basil."

He said gloomily: "No, and you are better not to."

He lit a cigar from the box that she fetched, and she went away with the coffee-tray and left him to dream—to muse—to take after a little while from his pocket a packet he had brought downstairs with him—to unfold it—consider it with a certain tender skepticism. In the packet of letters were several photographs—Lady Ormond in riding-dress, Lady Ormond in fancy dress. After looking once at each he put them in the fire with the pile of letters which he did not unfold. Then he sat heaped in a corner of the sofa and brooded—brooded—watching the fire eat and consume, protestations whose feebleness his great need had found sweet because forbidden—all the long link of association with dishonor for three years. He had never idealized her—a sparkling wit, a good humor, and grace had acted as a gentle counter-irritant to his moods. She had never been indispensable, and when her refusal came he had been glad. Why? only because a new interest had, like a fine ray from an unexpected beacon, cut across the lonely, ragged promontory, and his ship was sailing along its path.

"Otherwise, God knows how desolate it would have left me," he said aloud, and with the word smiled a little and shivered. "Not that I am not desolate as it is, but my new folly has smoothed the way for the exit of the old. That's about all." He sat brooding—brooding—until Henly, venturing, came softly in to ask if he wanted anything more.

"Heavily!"

"Yes, Mr. Tempest."

"Mr. Tempest!" he mocked. "If I fetched you a stick to-day, could you sharpen it into a pencil for me, do you think?"

She smiled tenderly. "Ah, no better than in those days, I'm afraid, Mr. Basil."

"Never mind. But if you know how I've longed and needed those pencils! Made for me by another—put in my hand—and even then the hand guided!"

"You've not been writing!"

"Whenever Henly omitted the name of her master he might mentally have supplied 'my dear' to take its formal place and not been wrong."

"Writing! I haven't written for an eternity."

She went dally to Craven. There had never been a word since the night she left Tempest in the empty room regarding her appearance or his expecting her. She went, whether or not she knew it to be unconventional, whether or not she feared the criticism of Mrs. Ramsdill and Tempest's servants and was above it; whether or not she knew she had a sacred duty to fulfill to art, to posterity, in enabling the master to work; (for work he did without even the tribute of a personal word for hours!) whether there was another reason for her going—the strongest, most cogent of reasons, against which no woman can reason without being aided by man's indifference—at all events, to Craven Lucy Carow went faithfully, daily walking the half mile between Ramsdill's cottage and the castle.

This year there was no November dreariness to chill her spirit or aid her to consider soberly what folly she was guilty of, what danger she ran. Someone drew upon the calendar of brilliant days with reckless extravagance. If it were Tempest, he saw that his scribe approached Craven in a shower of sunshine.

Her walk lay by way of a field and meadow path for a quarter of a mile; a passage through a hedge by means of a little old stile, when she gained, with an abruptness that always seemed a sort of impertinence, the front of the castle.

Every morning Craven met her appreciative, beauty-loving eyes with fresh insistence. The perfect congruity of its ensemble; the correct ancient lines of Tudor architecture; the space and dignity; the harmony of dim, faded stone; the bigness of the mass, whose importance was visible the country round from hill to hill. Close to the house, like a shadow, was the blur of a pine-growth, the red of beeches in the near crouching density of the park, where she had once been with Tempest.

Park and wood—the dim avenue by which she came; the lie of the valleys, their edges softened and molded by hedged farms and full-limbed oaks; the haze of atmosphere pink and gold in color; the slow-rising smoke from little, nestling cottages and from the leaf fires on the green, all held by an eternal silence and peace that the old countries alone know, soothed her mind and spirit anew at each long look she gave. Everything on which her eyes rested suggested age and tradition—there was nothing new in the landscape from farm and field, hedge, grove, and noble trees, to the castle door. It spoke to her, all of it, with one voice. England met her here in a friendly way—in, one might say, a motherly way, making an appeal to some latent heritage in her blood possibly—certainly finding response in Lucy Carow.

These impressions and delights, of course, above all, the envelope, the subtle, delicious surrounding to the reality of the man who was absorbing her. She at times rebelled at the mastery of the force that drew her so irresistibly and wondered if some voice out of the new world would not speak out, recall her. But alas for Lucy Carow! there was no such voice to call.

She arrived at ten to write in Mr. Tempest's study until a little after 12. Then, with no invitation from him to remain to luncheon, and a sincere gratitude on her part that there was no question of it, she departed by the way she had come, reaching Ramsdill's for a meal of Spartan simplicity; as if by consent to an unspoken wish of hers, no bon-mots were sent to her there any more.

He gave her no evidence of the pleasure he took in her presence, as with faithful accuracy and unflinching patience she bent over the pages that grew like snow-piles at her side. But had there been another observer he might have thought as she bent unconsciously over her pages that his eyes studied her—her lovely head there under the dark mass of her hair a sort of freight seemed to burn the edges with bronze and rodden her slender hand as it traveled over the pages; her leaning form; the pure outline of her grave, interested face—indeed, the observer might think that Tempest inspired himself from this youth and levellness. When she lifted, as now and again she did in query, her eyes to him, he drank from them as from wells.

The Belted "Millionaire."

The master's office at Kimberley has recently been the scene of a dramatic discovery. It has reference to the affairs of Thomas Istad, who, some months ago, left Orligtown for German West Africa, and whose death was reported from that territory.

His wife, remaining in Orligtown, receiving no news from her husband, and being in poor circumstances, obtained employment at a hotel there. The master, on hearing of Istad's death, requested the German authorities to forward the deceased's effects. They, accordingly, packed his belongings—chiefly clothing—in a wooden box, which was dispatched to Cape Town, and thence to Kimberley. On being unpacked the box was found to contain a red flannel waist belt, which on being closely examined, was discovered to be thickly lined with bank notes to the amount of £3,750. The deceased had been in the habit of trading in second-hand jewelry and carrying the belt without any one knowing about it—Cape Colony Times.

Farmers should eat more oatmeal.

Although the farmer of today is able to buy almost anything he wants to wear or eat he isn't paying enough attention to food values when it comes to his own table.

He feeds his stock carefully, avoids over-feeding and selects the stock food that he believes will give the best returns in strength and general efficiency.

If he has been watching the extensive researches and experiments on the question of the best human food for muscle and brain he will heed the advice from all sides to "eat more Quaker Oats."

Quaker Oats is mentioned because it is recognized in this country and Europe as the best of all oatmeals. Feeding farm hands on Quaker Oats means getting more work out of them than if you feed them on anything else.

That irrepressible Manchester Union man gave himself a surprise party by going to church last Sunday and this was the result: "On this first Sunday of Lent, while George Bailey of the Houston Post is sacrilegiously fishing for eels in a Texas bayou, and the (married) paragraph of the Kennebec Journal is tapping his boots, and the Oling-Ging Gophus of the Springfield Union is playing seven-up, we, in common with other good New Hampshire people, shall dutifully attend church."—Springfield Union.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; and cases like this are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but so inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

relieves in six hours. Why suffer? It's easier to break away than it is to get back.

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle, pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of illness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constitutional condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly, fact that it is the only remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is, therefore, all-important in order to get its beneficial effects, to purchase and note that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

It is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the kidneys, liver and bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and assists in overcoming habitual constipation permanently, also biliousness and the many ills resulting therefrom. The great trouble with all other purgatives and aperients is not that they fail to act when a single dose is taken, but that they act too violently and invariably tend to produce a habit of body requiring constantly augmented doses. Children enjoy the pleasant taste and gentle action of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna; the ladies find it delightful and beneficial whenever a laxative remedy is needed, and business men pronounce it invaluable, as it may be taken without interfering with business and does not grip nor nauseate. When buying note the name, California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of every package. Price, 50 cents a bottle.

COULD NOT SEE THE FUTURE

Views of Statesmen of Earlier Days as to the West Are Simply Ludicrous.

It is hard for us of the present day to realize that there ever was a time when the size and importance of the United States was so little understood that grants of land were given to individuals desiring "all the land from Virginia west" and "all the lands west of the Mississippi river" between certain northern and southern boundaries, for small sums of money or in recognition of some service to the existing government.

And still later, not more than a century ago, two of the most productive sections of our great country were thought to be entirely worthless.

In referring to the Oregon country north of the Columbia river Daniel Webster wrote: "I believe Oregon to be a poor country, no way important to England and of little use to the United States."

On the same subject Senator Duffy said on the floor of the senate that he would not give a "pinch of snuff for the whole country" as an agricultural proposition, and with mock gravity concluded his arraignment with "I thank God for having placed the Rocky mountains there." At that time that mountain range was deemed impassable.

At the conclusion of the Mexican war when New Mexico and California, which tract includes what is now Arizona, were ceded to the United States as part of the indemnity, Daniel Webster referred to them as "a barren waste—a desert of plain and mountain; a region of savages and wild beasts; deserts of shifting sands and whirlwinds of dust, of cactus and prairie dogs."

"I have never heard of anything and I cannot conceive anything more ridiculous in itself, more absurd and more affrontive to all sober judgment than the cry that we are getting indemnity by the acquisition of New Mexico and California. I hold that they are not worth a dollar."

And all this pessimism was expressed by the big men of the nation but a few years ago. What would these men think of these states now?

THE POISONS IN COAL GAS

Many Are Known, But There Is One Constituent That Is a Puzzle to Scientists.

The poisonous properties of coal gas are generally attributed to its content of carbonic oxide, especially as no other substance of known poisonous properties has been found in it, and patients suffering from coal gas poisoning show the symptoms associated with the inhalation of carbonic oxide, including the peculiar bright red color of the blood. From experiments made by Dr. von Vahlen, at Halle, it seems probable that we must revise this view, for on making experiments with frogs, animals particularly resistant to carbonic oxide, it was found that they were poisoned far more rapidly by coal gas than by the corresponding amount of the oxide. Other experiments with dogs showed that the poisonous effect of coal gas was twice or three times as great as that of the carbonic oxide it contained. Evidently there is some other constituent of coal gas which is poisonous, though what it is cannot yet be stated. Merely removing the carbonic oxide from coal gas will not suffice to render it non-poisonous.—The Ironmonger.

COSTS MUCH MONEY

EXPENSE OF LAUNCHING DEBUTANTE IN NEW YORK SOCIETY.

To Do the Thing in Style Will Set Papa's Bank Account Back a Few Thousand Dollars at the Least.

New York has a tradition that all debutantes must be brought out in November and December. There must be no left-overs for January, which is the month of the ball and the dinner dance.

"In London or Paris there are sometimes six or seven dances in one evening during the season," says a writer in Vogue. "People pass from one to another, showing themselves for a few minutes here, having supper there, and perhaps appearing at another place before going home."

"In Paris I believe the dances given for debutantes are called bals blancs, and at them there are many chapters, for a French girl as a rule is seldom left alone with a man. However, to-day I hear that the rules are less rigid than they were in the last generation."

"The bal blanc is not as tiresome, perhaps, as the reception—invariably held in New York in the afternoon—but the last-named entertainment is at least a meeting place for old friends. As a rule there are too many invited, the rooms are apt to be close and the refreshments are sometimes on too liberal a scale."

"Champagne is a wine to be taken moderately at dinner, at supper or at wedding receptions; otherwise it is not the best form to serve it before candles are lighted, when punch, orangeade and mineral waters are quite sufficient."

"The luncheon for debutantes is a new idea, and novelties are not as thick as autumnal leaves in a Valambrosa. Each city has its assembly or its series of dances, and years ago girls who came out only in this way, that is without any special entertainment being given for them, were said to have made their debuts by subscription. It was a cruel way of putting it, but at any rate every girl is now determined to have a separate entertainment, whether it is a simple tea, a large crush reception with the usual dinner and theater to the receiving party, or a dance."

"It is naturally quite an expensive undertaking, because there are so many items to be considered, especially in small households when a force of extra people must be called in to provide an awning, music, flowers, refreshments, a man to call carriages and footmen or special servants. And when in addition to this a party to the play is given, with dinner before, supper and dancing afterward, extra motors and other expenses, it is difficult to bring out a young girl well, that is to say in the best New York fashion, without spending a few thousand dollars. And this does not include gowns."

Gibbon on Fame.

Edward Gibbon, the historian, was not one to underestimate the pleasures of intellectual occupation or the value of literary fame. "I have drawn a high prize in the lottery of life," he wrote in his autobiography. "I am disgusted with the affectation of men of letters who complain that they have renounced a substance for a shadow, and that their fame affords a poor compensation for envy, censure and persecution."

"My own experience has taught me a very different lesson; twenty happy years have been animated by the labors of my history and its success has given me a name, a rank, a character in the world to which I should otherwise not have been entitled."

"D'Alembert relates that as he was walking in the gardens of Sans Souci with the king of Prussia, Frederick said to him, 'Do you see that old woman'.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering, therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fall to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It is the highest because its remarkable health restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best, sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Piquette, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you anything in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

an, a poor weeder, asleep on that sunny bank? She is probably a more happy being than either of us."

"The king and philosopher may speak for themselves; for my part, I do not envy the old woman."—Youth's Companion.

Will Women Abandon Love?

Gertrude Atherton, the novelist, has been writing for Harper's Bazar on "The Woman in Love." In her first two papers Mrs. Atherton discusses those women in history whose love episodes have been the most striking thing about them. In her third paper, however, not yet published, she makes some predictions concerning the place that love will take in the future. Mrs. Atherton does not go so far as Mrs. Belmont, who predicts that there will be a war between the sexes, due to the fact that men will not give women the suffrage. Mrs. Atherton believes and states, however, that from now on the love element will be a far less vital thing in women's lives than it has been heretofore. She thinks that the broadening out of feminine interests, the entrance of women into new fields, the intellectual development of women, are all factors which will fill women's lives to the comparative exclusion of that other factor which heretofore has been supposed to be "her whole existence."

His Money.

"How did he make his money?" "Out of several important inventions." "I didn't know he was an inventor." "He isn't. He employs a lawyer who can draw papers that seem to mean what they don't."

NEW METHODS OF SOCIALISM

Enterprise in European Cities Based on a Hint Taken from the Financial Magnates.

In Europe, if we may believe such a writer and student as Prof. Brooks, the more advanced socialists have practically abandoned the old communism which is still groped after by the noisy socialists of America and have turned to more practical things by developing the infinite forms of co-operative industry.

In Belgium and in many other parts of Europe, as in England, the advanced socialists are to-day the co-operators. They have taken the hint of the financial magnates and organized co-operative stores, mills, bakeries and so on—in short, formed joint stock companies for the conduct of productive and distributive lines of business for their own benefit and profit.

In the great Austrian capital, Vienna, we find such a socialist venture—a great flouring mill and a bread bakery, known as the "Hammer Brand Works" of the "Forward Co-Operative store," an association or company of workmen that has some 70,000 members.

The great establishment, which was opened on June 20 last, stands on a site once occupied by a cloister and later by an iron smelter and also a flouring mill. The great building erected by the socialists contains a flouring mill of the most modern type known to Austrian milling, with capacity to supply flour for a bakery turning out about 150,000 pounds of bread daily, "and then some," the mill marketing a large part of its products directly in the form of flour. The bakery in its turn is also a model of its kind with great, cheerful, clean and cleanable workrooms and the most advanced machinery for manufacturing bread with the least possible manual labor or contact with human hands, the movable parts of the machinery all getting power from electric motors. Cleanliness and perfection of the products is the aim.—Bakers' Weekly.

Whistling and Work.

Whistling has been called an evidence of cheerfulness. But most normal persons will pronounce the cheerful whistler an unmilitated nuisance. It is not to be assumed that the cheerful whistler is a willing worker—upon the contrary, whistling may be taken as evidence presumptive of a vacant mind. The art of whistling is difficult. The artistic whistler is an expert and commands money at the ticket office. The ordinary unconscious whistler drives unwilling hearers to distraction. He is an irritant.

This explains why an applicant for a position was rejected at the office to which he was recommended. Not only did he whistle while waiting, but he whistled "Auld Lang Syne." The employer decided promptly that the whistler would not fill the job. Perhaps had the whistler whistled "A Hot Time" and whistled it well, his selection of a tune would have been regarded as an indication of an alert disposition, of readiness to think and act quickly, of ability to hustle, and to make his surroundings colorful by fiction with hard work. But his selection of an air of sentimental reminiscence caused the inference that his mind was dwelling in the past rather than in the living, active present.
